In the Rhine country in Germany the belief in prophery is widespread, and it is thought that certain events have been influenced to fulfillment by the popular belief. The great tattle of the Birch Tree, near Werl, in Westphalia, which took place in 1814 was predicted by several seers. In 1601, by a Munk of Werl, and in 1672, by a Capochio Monk of Desseldorf. The battle was stimutely described, and was long the superstition of the common people previous to its ful-fillment. The Capauchin Monk also predicted that a Pope and four Cordinals would come to reside at Cologue, which has been fulfilled since the publication of the authority I quote from-in 1850 by Pius IX. Another prediction was that William, "the Powerful Prince," would become Emperor of Germany, and that France would be then divided into three parties. This has been fulfilled since 1871.
